WEEKLY SUMMARY

Week No. 18 summary

The legislature returned to session Monday and Thursday for procedural purposes only. There was no floor or committee work. The legislature is past the end of per-diem payments that ended April 19. Iowa law does not require adjournment by a specific date, but the legislative session must end by June 30, the end of the state's fiscal year, for the state government to remain funded and operating. Now that the June 7 primaries are around the corner, legislators will likely remain in session past the primary elections, further delaying the legislative session as they work to come to agreements on education issues and the budget.

Because the number of updates have slowed, we will pause the Legislative Bulletin and resume when legislative work picks up. Until then, questions can be directed to Erin Cubit, Jenny Klein and Jamie Horbach at IHA.

Despite legislative work slowing in the House and Senate, bills are moving in the governor's office. Gov. Kim Reynolds signed House File 2200 into law this week. Current law allows certain primary care health professions to enter into a primary care agreement with patients to provide certain services for a set service charge that covers a specific period. HF 2200 broadens the types of health care professionals that may enter into direct health care agreements to include professionals who provide health care services including diagnosis, prevention, treatment, cure or relief of a health condition, illness, injury, or disease and dental services.
